WEEZIE'S WORDS

by Louise Okoniewski

I've been trying to remember how long I've been a member of the Greenfield historical society. I have to go back to when I met Ron Feulner in the 90s. Myself and Tom (Merrills) had "Tinney's Two" at Lake Desolation and offered breakfast, lunch and dinner. One morning Ron, Alice and his mother stopped in for breakfast. I believe the blueberry pancakes kept him and his family coming back. Ron enjoyed that spot as his Uncle Philip Feulner built and operated the Lakeview Hotel in the early 1900s, and Ron had just completed his book, King of the Mountain. Always looking for something family orientated, we had a book signing for Ron's new book. Plywood and dark blue velvet covered the pool table. Alvie Older and a few residents brought glass bottles and other artifacts from the glass factory and Middle Grove. The items were carefully arranged and stood out against the blue velvet. As this was something never tried before (at least not at the lake), we didn't know if it would be a success or a flop. Ron, Alice, Tom, employees and I were nervous and excited. The night was a huge success, Ron signed and sold many books, the kitchen was busy and a friendship was born.

After leaving the business in 1998, we kept in contact usually at Stewarts. A few years had passed and one day Ron asked me if I'd like to attend a historical society meeting. It took some prodding (over a period of time) but I finally made it to a meeting. Ron asked me to be on a committee to consider options for Odd Fellows Hall. The committee included Joyce Woodard, Vince Walsh and Harold Jones. After a few meetings and some brain storming, it was decided to keep the IOOF and eventually have a museum. We would need to let the public know what they had in their own backyard. The hall had items that were from the Odd Fellow membership, plus donations from Galway Fellows and Greenfield family items that were donated. Joyce Woodard and Ann Michel started the daunting task of sifting through the boxes and organizing the collections. One of the ideas was to sponsor a Farmers Market. That fall, Andy Fyfe, sold veggies from the back of his pickup on the IOOF lawn.

The hall itself needed repairs. Trees were taken down, the building was raised and sill replaced, the kitchen became an office, insulated and the hall was painted outside. Ron Deutsch took the challenge of the Farmers Market, and we had 7 vendors at the IOOF. Add some garage sales from the carriage house, renovation work, the weekly market, the hall was open and it was quite busy. Due to traffic concerns, we moved to the Middle Grove Park, this will be the 5th year of our Farmers Market. The goal of the museum was still in the works. Because of the generous donation from the Eugene Chatfield estate, the board came up with the Eugene Chatfield Museum. Improvements still needed to be made, such as a good quality of heat. And because we are limited on funds, we need to be frugal on how and where the money goes. IOOF hall reminds me of restoring an antique car. You can spend a lot of money and do it fast, or you can take your time as you have the money and do it right. Finally, all the hard work from MANY people was starting to show. Despite a setback after the wonderful Christmas Party 2011, Rob Roeckle and the board rolled up their sleeves and had an inspiring meeting on April 17. Mr. Bill Hinckley couldn't believe it when he walked through the upstairs. He has waited a long time for this dream of his to come true. Earl Jones' smile was ear to ear. That was enough for me! Bill and Earl started talking about Greenfield baseball (maybe a future display). Others were looking at the display area for the Odd Fellows and Masons. Far from being completed, the Chatfield Museum is starting to take shape.

How long have I been a member? I'm not sure, but when I see the dedication of the Newsletter, Refreshment, Archives, Program, Grounds, Market Committees, Thom S. and the website, Sandy and Facebook, members who bake or will man a booth or give a hand; those who kept it together in the early years; I'm glad to be a part of this organization.

Historian's Corner – by Ron Feulner

One of my volunteers, Ruth Ann Assmann, has been working at indexing our newsletters. Recently she finished the project, and I suggested that she might want to do the same with the few copies of "The Grist Mill" that we have. She has now finished that project also, but while she was still working on it, she called my attention to the feature article in the May 1984 issue which was called "Benjamin Grenell, Life Revealed as Middle Grove Shopkeeper."

Since I grew up in Middle Grove, the article was of considerable interest to me, as I recognized some of the places and people's names. The article is based on a set of store records that were kept between 1802 and 1810 by the store owner, Benjamin Grenell. The store ledger had been a gift to the Saratoga County Museum Society given in 1979 by Mr. and Mrs. Francis Harrington of Rock City Falls.

Benjamin Grenell was the fifth of ten children born to his parents in Salisbury, Connecticut. At the age of twenty-three, he came to New York and settled in a section of the Town of Greenfield which would one day become Middle Grove. In 1793, he married Phebe Dennison, and the couple had four children, but only two boys survived. The family lived in a small residence that also served as a general store which supplied most of the necessities to area residents. I remember the house that they lived in from my youth (the house is still standing, it is the fifth one down from Murray Road on the left) very well because my teacher, Mrs. Johnson, and her husband, Fred, lived in it when I was growing up in Middle Grove. Later the Fergusons lived there, and then I lost track and have no idea who owns the house now. The Grenells had a small family cemetery just below the house which can still be visited but is not very visible from the road.

The five store ledgers kept by Benjamin Grenell tell a fascinating story about life in that area during the early 1800s. Bounties were paid for animals killed that ranged from 3 cents for a crow to fifty dollars for a wolf. Bears were a nuisance and were regularly hunted by the community until William Williams was accidentally shot and killed on one such outing.

Grenell not only sold things that ranged from materials to build a coffin to spirits (liquor) sold by the glass full or gallon, but he also bartered for products produced by other members of the community. He also provided services to people for a fee. He wrote wills, deeds, and even surveyed property lines. The Grenells apparently offered rooms for rent and charged people fines for items that they broke such as a glass tumbler. He even lists fines for, "Pig killed by accident," and for "pissing the bed."

As I mentioned earlier, it wasn't all about selling products and services, but bartering was alive and well. People were given store credit for such diverse activities as "making a plough iron" and "digging a grave." Some things bartered must have ended up on Grenell's farm. Items listed included "a sow and pigs," "one pair of oxen," "a cow," and "a heifer." Services offered included such activities as "making ... two pair of shoes," and "pasturing oxen." He must have also boarded the schoolmaster for that is also listed along with "wood for the school."

He apparently bought many of his supplies that couldn't be manufactured locally in Albany, as he often gave credit to local farmers for using their horses and wagons for transporting goods from that city along with fewer trips to Stillwater and Troy.

It was mostly men's names listed in the ledger with only a few women who may have been widows. It is possible that when women bought goods it was charged to their father or husband, but all we know for certain is that the vast majority of names are men's.

This store was more like an early trading post than like the stores that we know today who specialize in one line of products such as food or building materials. In those days, the local store provided everything a family needed to survive.

If you are not familiar with these little newsletters which were published quarterly by the Saratoga County Museum, I would recommend that you visit our office some Wednesday and spend a few hours reading them, for they are fascinating. Brookside Museum in Ballston Spa may have a more complete set of these than we do, but I don't know that for a fact.

On a completely different subject, Rick Bishop brought his Garmin GPS to the April meeting held at the IOOF hall in Middle Grove. He wanted to show me how it could be used to find the latitude and longitude of our cemeteries, which you might remember me writing about in an earlier newsletter. I was so impressed that I went out and got my Garmin from the car, and we both stood outside the hall in the lawn area and checked both instruments, and they gave almost identical readings. This means that if someone wanted to help map the location of our cemeteries in Greenfield, we wouldn't need any special equipment other than the common GPS systems that many of us have in our cars. Give me a call at 518-893-0620 if you would be interested in helping out with such a project. Thanks, Rick for calling my attention to this.

This will be my last Historian's Corner entry until next September, so I hope you all have a great summer.

The Rocking Chair

by Fran Lambert 10/08/2008

Introduction: Just a little novelty story to get ones' mind thinking about what we really value in life. History is very important. It is one of the building blocks of wisdom.

Ah! supper's all done!

Paw jest put 'nother log in the fire, and now maybe I kin git down to finishin' this shawl.

Now where'd that crochet hook number nine go to this time?

Ah! there it is! Gotta git this dun afore the light gits too dim! Lands sakes alive! Its bin eight months since I started this 'ere shawl.

I shure hope Sonnies new wife likes it. She seems to like green and yaller, along with some sky blue. I bin tryin' to make her happy, poor lil' thing. She shore is a purty gal, and Sonny did fine marryin' her up.

So nice that paw an me finally git to have more family, We bin livin' way out here so long, and not seein' many folk come by fer visitin'.

It was real good when I was younger, I managed to walk into town every so often, and visit the town folk. But then as I gitted older, the trail seemed longer, or was it that these ole' bones were gittin' shorter?

Naw, I think the rocks and boulders jes' got bigger, an I had to work harder to git around them. I reckymember the past few years we had so much rain fall that it washed most of the sand from around the boulders, and they actually did look bigger!

Oops! I dropped a stitch, I better do it over agin. This 'ere shawls got to be purfect for Sonnies new gal. I luv sittin' in this 'ole rockin' chair ... me maw put many a lil' youngin' asleep rockin' them in this 'ere chair.

I wonder if I'll have a chance to rock a new youngin' in the family chair? Thet's why I want this to be so purfect for her, I want to do this shawl up proud!

Dear me! the lights gittin' dimmer, an' I can't see good enough to do the stitches. Hey Paw! the fireplace needs more wood.

Thanks fer doin' that! Yes, I'm almost finished with this; last row. There! done! Ah! it's good to sit back an' feel the warmth of the fire and rock.

Well I'll be! I dun fell asleep in this chair all night. I better git to fixin' breakfast before Paw and Sonny and his wife git here.

Least it's a sunshine day, an' I don't have to worry about finishin' the shawl. It's done!

I better hide it in the cedar chest paw made for me. It's to be a surprise for her. There!

Breakfast is ready. Everybody sit down, The eggs are done, and I warmed up the bread I made yesterday in the oven, and there's some slabs of bacon I jes' fried up good an' brown. Paw got some honey last week from the nest out in the back forty. I didn't git all the comb out of it, but it will make the bread taste crunchy and sweeter. Hope ya'll like it.

I bin thinkin' ... how are you fixed for a sittin' place in yer new home? Iffin' y'all got town folk come visitin', y'all need a place fer them to sit.

Ole' Missus Cravitz from the general store gave you her set she bought two years ago? Thet was mighty nice of her! She has a new set now I reckon. You wish your's was new too? Oh! I see! you only like new things in yer home. Ain't thet nice!

Stop by again sometime soon. Glad to have you over anytime.

Paw, its' bin three months since we seen Sonny and his new wife, I wonder iffen they be alright? I was planning on surprisin' them with this new shawl, and I was goin to drape it over the back of the rockin' chair, 'cause they go together so fine! I am mighty proud to share the family chair with them, D'ya think they'll like it and the shawl?

It's as fine a piece of furniture as ever bin made, all hand carved and turned by great grandpaw, and it rocked many a youngin'. Why it's history!

You think they'll like it fine! That's good to hear. I hear somebody comin' up the trail, lookit paw, it's Sonny and his wife!

Now I can give them their surprise! I've shined up the chair with the fresh polish you jest made, and it looks grand. I've draped the shawl over the back and it looks beautiful.

Yes Paw, I'll miss rocking in the old chair, but I want to share the history of our family with them two youngins. You can git the other ole' chair out in the shed and give 'er a good fixin' up, and I'll have 'nuther one to rock in.

Here they come. C'mon in, git warm by the fire. Ain't seen y'all in quite a spell. Everthing fine? That's good.

Yer havin a youngin'? Well, ain't that grand. I'm so happy fer y'all. Come have a bite to eat. I've got a surprise fer ya.

Come in the sittin' room. Look under thet blanket. Here, I'll lift it off! This is yer surprise. I crocheted this 'ere shawl fer ya. Now you can use it when it comes time to rock the baby in the family rocking chair. That's yers to keep also. Hope ya like it. Yes, it's about one hundred twenty seven years old. Shes in good shape and still has plenty of good wood fer rockin' a new youngin'.

Glad ya came over, be careful goin' roun the boulder carryin' that rocker, and enjoy the shawl! Paw and me will be over to see ya next week.

Time goes by so fast, here it is, an we're halfway to their house already! My, what a beautiful house! We're so happy for ya'll. Oh! is this the lovely set ya were tellin us about from ole Missus Cravitz? It's very nice!

Thank ya'll for the cake ya made fer Paw and me, that was so thoughtful! We'd best be goin' before it gets too dark. Keep happy!

Paw, did you notice something in their house? Ya didn't? Where is the rockin' chair I was so proud to give them and rock their youngin' in?

It was hangin' where? In the shed? I wonder why?

Oh! now I understand, they don't want anything that old in their house, and even Missus Cravitz's old set is not new enough.

What a shame – family history ... hangin in the shed.
